

2023 CONFERENCE WED. JANUARY 18TH

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

Due by 5:00pm EST on Dec. 1st, 2022

Selected speakers will receive one free admission to the OIPC conference

Each year, the Ontario Invasive Plant Council Conference brings together hundreds of professionals and concerned citizens with an interest in the management of invasive plants. We are now accepting abstracts for presentations to be held on January 18th, 2023.

Our 2023 conference will once again be held virtually on Remo, our industry leading virtual outreach and networking software! We will provide training to selected speakers.

Conference Theme: Building Resilient Communities

This year we will showcase a community approach to invasive plant management through building resilient communities and broadening perspectives to foster coordinated action towards the control and management of invasive plants. This year's conference will encourage people to work together towards healthy ecosystems and biodiversity in a changing climate. It will provide an opportunity to explore strategies, programs, partnerships, knowledge and research that shape and build resilient management of invasive plants.

The OIPC invites proposals from all fields, with projects focused on broadening perspectives and building resilient communities and strategies for invasive plant management

Please submit your abstract form no later than December 1st, 2022, at 5:00pm EST.

The submission form is available here or at the attached QR code.

Speakers will be notified of the committee's decision by December 9th, 2022. All questions may be directed to Emily Mitchell via email to Coordinator@OnInvasives.ca.
